DRUPA 2024 HIGHLIGHTS: UNFOLD YOUR POTENTIAL WITH HEIDELBERG

Heidelberg - drupa 2024 took place at two different locations where innovative products in packaging and print were on display to showcase innovations that will help printers and packaging converters combat the three major challenges facing the industry and the entire production workflow from prepress, press and postpress.

These three challenges are;

- The ever-increasing cost pressures
- Shortage of skilled workers
- Growing sustainability requirements

Latest machines and workflow innovations that cover the commercial, publishing and packaging areas from Heidelberg and their partners - Polar and Masterwork where on display.

Heidelberg is committed to helping its customers in the area of sustainability. Today's Speedmaster machines now use 40% less energy through a variety of techniques than the similar models from the 1990s. A good example is the inline Prinect Inpress Control spectral measurement system that reduces the makeready time and waste in addition to monitoring colour quality throughout the entire press run.

Heidelberg at drupa 2024 announced its return to industrial inkjet printing with a pair of machines - Jetfire 50 for B3 format and Jetfire 75 for B2 format in partnership with Canon. Heidelberg is promoting these solutions for hybrid production in combined offset and digital environment where both presses can be linked together in a latest interaction of the company's Prinect Workflow.

At the center of the exhibition space sits the Experience Center where information are obtained on different topics such as AI-driven analysis tools, intelligent assistance systems, online services and sustainable production solutions to improve print production leading to simplified operation, achieving sustainability without compromising profitability and leveraging digitalization.

Digitalization of printing processes through end-to-end integration and automation of the production processes were on display. Commercial printers were able to see peak performance generation of the Speedmaster XL 106 with a printing speed of 21,000 sheets per hour with AI-based assistance features. The Push to Stop technology for autonomous operation eliminates 98% of the manual touch points associated with high-volume offset production.

On display was also the new Boardmaster flexographic web printing machine for packaging converters focused on folding carton production. This new system supports up to 90% machine uptime and a maximum printing speed of 600 meters per minute with only a few meters of unprinted material when changing jobs non-stop for uninterrupted output.

Celebrating its premiere at drupa was the Stahlfolder TH 82-P buckle plate folding machine. The Peak Performance folding machine was presented in a new design with a simplified operating concept. This was presented alongside the new StackStar C, a collaborative and flexible robot for automatic depositing of product stacks for further processing.

Lastly, Heidelberg's partner; Masterwork displayed the newly introduced the Ecocut Die-cutter and the FB II Bestfold Foldergluer which are economical and practical equipment for vast number of printing packaging organizations.
